Hon. President's Remarks

We hear increasingly, these days, of the growing apathy towards amateur productions and how club after club in the Highlands has to close because of "lack of support."

It is all the more creditable, I feel, that the Inverness Opera Company has never had to declare, as so many others have, that "Unless more support . . ." Indeed, they have continued the extremely high level of production and performance which, three years ago, was declared "over-ambitious."

We must not get complacent. Our success is due to two main factors :—

- (1) The enthusiasm and undoubted talent of our company, who put in long hours of planning rehearsal (accompanied by a great deal of worry and apprehension), and
- (2) The support of our associate members, whose subscriptions make it possible for us to continue with that financial backing which is so necessary.

This year, we are presenting "Call Me Madam," which will be at least as tuneful and colourful as any of our former productions. Please show your support by becoming an Associate Member, or continuing to be one, and come along personally to see — and be delighted by — this very talented company, which exists for your pleasure.

Thanking you,
Yours,

KAY GRIGOR.

THE STORY

We meet Mrs Sally Adams in the act of being sworn by the Supreme Court Justice. She has been appointed United States Ambassador to the Grand Duchy of Lichtenburg. Truly, at that time, a remarkable honour for a woman ! At her farewell party immediately following, she tells young Kenneth Gibson how the appointment came to her. It is her award for being the chosen party giver for the White House Clientele — the Queen of all the Madams and the hostess with the mostes' on the ball ! Ken goes with her to Lichtenburg as private secretary. Sally snootily establishes her authority at the Embassy by telling the Chargé d'Affaires to " Call me Madam."

A change of government in Lichtenburg and resultant change of Foreign Secretary bring about a change in Sally's policy. With the first Foreign Secretary, Tantinnin, she had been rigid in refusing an American loan. But upon Cosmo Constantine, who succeeds him, Sally tries to force a huge loan ; she fell in love with him on sight. His high-minded principle, however, is that his country must find its own salvation without foreign aid. Sally just cannot believe that to be possible and, with the best of intentions, she manoeuvres from Washington the offer of a vast sum of dollars. It infuriates Cosmo and he resigns office. That precipitates a general election — the first in over twenty years. Meanwhile, Ken and Princess Maria, the heir to the throne, have also fallen in love. Theirs is a hopeless case until the result of the election, returning Cosmo to power, literally frees the Duchy from fuedalism. This great boon reflects adversely upon Sally — she is recalled to Washington in disgrace for having been partisan during the election by canvassing for Cosmo. Sadly, she bids good-bye to Lichtenburg and to her beloved Cosmo. On the other hand, it has cleared the way for Maria to marry a commoner, and it is she who proposes to Ken. His father has laid the foundation of prosperity for Lichtenburg by financing a water power plant that will industrialise the Duchy.

Back home in Washington, Sally tries to save face by throwing a " coming home party." It seems foredoomed to be a flop ! Therefore, the arrival of the Secretary of State in itself causes a commotion. Nothing like so great, however, as is caused by his introduction of Cosmo Constantine, now the Prime Minister of Lichtenburg, who has been sent by the Grand Duke to invest Sally with the Order of Philip the First, for her services to the Duchy. And Cosmo takes Sally in his arms and they both walk on air.
