It's up to you whose hands you put your money into.

In the 1986 budget, the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave the thumbs up to a brand new payroll donation scheme.

Now anyone on a PAYE scheme can donate up to £120 every year, tax free, to the charities of their choice.

And that, you may be surprised to learn, is good news for the arts in Scotland. Because most Scottish arts organisations are either registered charities or have charitable status.

Any contributions you make to the arts from now on will be deducted from your pay before tax.

So money, which would have ended up clenched in the taxman's fist, goes straight into the hands of galleries, theatres and other arts organisations. And they can put every penny to good use.

If you think the arts in Scotland are important and want to support them, the easiest way is to give as you earn. As little as 25p or as much as £2.30 a week. And you can stop the payments at any time.

GIVE AS YOU EARN

Whatever you give, it will give us a helping hand. And the taxman won't lay a finger on it.
